BOSS JOHNSON GETS $7500 POSITION

Promoted From Resident Clerk of the House of Representatives at Harrisburg at $2500 per Year to State Insurance Commissioner, Paying Three Times More Money—Governor Tener Helps Penrose Machine.

Charles Johnson, of Norristown, was on Wednesday appointed State Commissioner of Insurance by Governor John K. Tener, commencing on the date from the time of appointment. Mr. Johnson will assume office at 7 o'clock. The salary is $7500 per year.

Johnson is the resident clerk of the house, a place that pays $2500 per year, and is the Republican organization loss of Montgomery county. He has been in the position for the place ever since the Insurance Department reorganization bill was passed in June by Tener. In the recent campaign Johnson carried Montgomery county, which was the last of the machine Senator Penrose, lost his bailiwick, Philadelphia, and this plum position as a reward for political activity.

Johnson will succeed Samuel W. McCulloch, of Philadelphia, who has been Commissioner for two years, having been appointed by Governor Edwin S. Stuart to succeed David Martin when Martin resigned to become Recorder of Wills of Philadelphia. McCulloch and Johnson have been about the only men seriously mentioned for the place.

Johnson goes into office backed by above named set of insurance laws as are to be found in the country. The Assembly had dangled along the session after session without doing much in the line of strengthening Pennsylvania's admittedly weak insurance laws until Tener took the helm last January and said that there must be something done. The consequence was that the session ended and Tener signed a group of bills embodying the good features of the laws of this kind in the various States.

It is understood Johnson will start his administration by driving every competitor out of the department, just as he did last year. He is a former member of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives, and he is a former member of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives.

MOTOR CAR HURT MAN ON YORK ROAD

Hit While Walking in Abington Village—Car Driver Arrested—Taxi cab Skidded Against Pole—Side-walks Needed.

Two more motorcar accidents in the Abington township section of Old York road were added to the long list York road and Tuesday night and have renewed the clamor for sidewalk protection for pedestrians. In one of the accidents Arthur T. Rush, of Abington Village, was badly hurt and in the second a taxicab was wrecked and the driver slightly injured.

Rush was driven by it, it was by a car driven by Walter H. Geiger, Jr., of No. 5145 Rho street, Philadelphia. He was knocked unconscious and was carried home in the car. Some time after the accident the Abington police issued a warrant for Geiger's arrest. The accident happened near the old Abington Presbyterian church.

Geiger, who is connected with a Philadelphia banking institution, has been confined to his bed since the accident and was unable to attend the hearing before Judge Williams on Wednesday night.

Geiger was held for a further hearing next Wednesday night, when it is thought Mr. Rush will be sufficiently recovered to be able to attend. No satisfactory explanation was given on Wednesday night as to just how the accident occurred.

The second accident happened at the foot of Noble hill, below the Huntington Village Country Club, Monday night. The driver, whose name the police have not obtained, lost control of the car, and it skidded across the roadway and smashed into an iron pole. The taxi was wrecked and the driver was thrown out, sustaining a number of bruises.

WOMAN CLAIMS SHARE OF DENNELER ESTATE

Teresa Burns Says She Was Common Law Wife of Deceased Merchant—Charles Denmeler, Jr., Summer Resident of Fort Washington Left $100,000—Denmeler Was Divorced From First Wife.

When the death of the estate of Charles Denmeler, Jr., formerly of Fort Washington, who for many years prior to his death on June 15, 1910, had a prosperous business at Eleventh and Sansom streets, Philadelphia, came up before Judge Cost, in orphan's court Monday in Philadelphia, Attorney Charles E. Bartlett, Samuel M. Hyman and Charles Goldsmith, representing Teresa Burns, presented a claim for one-third of the estate, which is estimated to be worth $100,000, as her share as the widow of Mr. Denmeler.

It was testified by the claimant that she first met the deceased in 1901, and that in June, 1902, she accompanied Mr. Denmeler to the Herald Square hotel, in New York City. It was about this time, she said, she first learned that Mr. Denmeler had a wife living, but she intended getting a divorce, and as soon as he had done so she would marry him.

The claimant said she and Denmeler continued together from June, 1902, until about the time he died. While living at 1213 Master street, Philadelphia, the claimant said, the deceased and his wife were known as Mr. and Mrs. Burns.

The witness told of taking two trips to Europe, the first in 1904, and the second in 1909. She said that while in foreign countries on the first trip, Denmeler introduced her to his wife. Under cross examination by Howard B. Lewis, the witness said Denmeler's sister had offered her $1000 from the estate of their brother, but as she considered that the law recognized her as the common-law wife of Denmeler, she thought she should receive the widow's one-third share of his estate. She admitted, however, that if they had not had a satisfactory sum she would not have revealed her life with Denmeler.

William W. Trinkle, a physician, testified that Mr. Denmeler was introduced to him as Mr. Burns and that the latter told him that he was Mrs. Burns was his wife.

He also told the physician, he testified, that he had never seen Mrs. Burns because his family would object. Although he knew that Burns was an assumed name, the physician said, he never inquired why the couple were living incoincidentally and was satisfied to let the evidence stand. Denmeler when the proper time arrived.

COUNTY BONDS TO BE PAID

Commissioners Cancel Part of Debt

But it Still is $530,000.

At a meeting of the County Commissioners held at Norristown Tuesday forenoon it was decided to pay of county bonds to the value of $15,000. These bonds are not due for payment until next year, but the Commissioners have in the past two years succeeded in paying off bonds to the extent of $145,000. The sinking fund in control of the Fund Commission made it possible to pay out this sum.

With Tuesday's payment deducted the county is still indebted to the extent of $530,000 this amount being due on bonds that are outstanding.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

WOMAN'S DEPARTMENT.

Dear Spirit Readers:

As the weather grows colder, we spend more of our afternoons calling on our friends, and we are glad to be refreshed by a cup of tea.

Afternoon tea is much more cozy if made in the parlor or living room than if brought in already made from the kitchen.

A good spirit lamp boils water in a very short time and the heat of the spirit lamp is always well fitted, otherwise it will go out at the critical moment. If the maid brings in hot water in the kettle it will only take a few minutes to boil.

Lemon slices should be separated when cut and not have a bit of skin that is uncut to hold them together. Seeds should be removed from the slices.

The small lemon fruit should not be muddled, but be in place on the tray when wanted.

If a tea ball is used it should be filled before.

A silver or china waste bowl is an absolute necessity for the tea table.

A glass fire screen is a great help in protecting the flame from a draught.

Tea is served with lemon or cream. In serving tea either have a plate of toasted bread with the crusts cut off, and some good jam or jelly, or serve cake or tarts. I will give some recipes for good cake.

SUGAR CAKES.

Cream one pound of granulated sugar with one half pound of butter. Add one teaspoonful of cinnamon to this and two eggs beaten light without separating. Beat in one pound of flour.

Roll very thin, cut with small cookie cutter sprinkle granulated sugar on top, and bake in a rather hot oven until light brown, about five minutes. These should be light, crisp, delicious wafers.

SUGAR GINGER WAFERS.

Cream three cupsful of granulated sugar with two and one-half cupsful of butter. Add alternately one cupful of milk and eight cupsful of pastry flour, beating until light and smooth.

Add one-fourth cupful of ginger previously sifted, and a teaspoonful of salt. Roll very thin, about five minutes. Roll very thin and bake quickly. This is an old family recipe used for afternoon teas for fifty years.

CHOCOLATE COOKIES.

One-half cupful of butter, 1 tablespoonful of lard, 1 cupful of sugar, 1 egg, 1/4 teaspoonful of salt, 1/2 teaspoonful of powdered cinnamon, 2 ounces of chocolate, 2/3 scant cupful of flour, 2 teaspoonfuls of baking powder, 1/4 cupful of milk. Cream the butter and lard together; add the sugar gradually, the egg well beaten, salt cinnamon, and chocolate melted. Beat well, and add the flour mixed and sifted with the baking powder alternately with the milk. Chill, roll very thin, then cut with a small cutter. Bake in a moderate oven.

GINGERSNAPS THAT SNAP.

One pint of molasses, 1 tablespoonful of baking soda, 1 cupful of lard, 1 tablespoonful of powdered ginger, 1 tablespoonful of powdered cloves, 1 tablespoonful of powdered cinnamon, flour to make a stiff batter. Roll the molasses for five minutes; remove from the fire and stir in the soda, lard, spices and flour. Set away to cool; roll out thin and bake in a hot oven.

COLD PREVENTATIVES.

The frequent changes in the climate in which we live, cause us to be subject to colds. Many times a little well directed thought and exercise will greatly assist throwing off this uncomfortable malady. There are a few points worth remembering:

When you go out into the cold breathe deeply. Be sure that your clothing is loose enough to allow of this. If you do not breathe properly you are immediately subject to colds.

If you are in an office all day, by all means take fresh air, and a short walk if possible at noon time.

Most of our homes and business places are overheated, and for this reason, the outdoor garments should be worn, and dresses of moderate weight. Girls who wear thin lingerie houses all winter, should be warned that this is well protected against cold draughts.

Always bathe the neck and chest in cold water, followed by an alcohol rub, before changing from a high neck to low neck gown, this cold water treatment is good for the majority of ailments at all times, but it should be done regularly, thus strengthening the throat, and rendering out the neck.

Last of all, if you catch a cold, don't ruffle up and sit by the fire. Put on your sweater, open your windows and go through all the bodily exercises you can remember from your school gymnastic lessons. Your circulation will start, and then you must not cool off too quickly, but take a walk in the open air.

FASHIONS, FADS AND FANCIES.

House dresses and even suits are made of white wool, broad cloth, serge, rayon and corduroy. White wool is strikingly and often delightfully combined with black velvet. A neat note is the single one piece frocks of white serge in the wool embroidery which has been taken up so enthusiastically by the cheaper manufacturers that it is already common; yet when cleverly and artistically handled it is a very effective trimming.

A good looking little frock in white serge has a collar of white satin, trimming down from a tiny dark neck guimpe of bright yet soft and clear green chiffon. A tiny plaited cord, down the front is of green and across this fasten straps of the serge embroidered in green and white wool.

Similar straps hold the skirt where at the bottom it is slit up to show just a glimpse of green underneath. Other models in white serge still more simple follow general lines familiar in the summer lines, but have wool embroidery in color for neck, cuffs, buttons, etc.

Velvet and velours are making strong bids for the place of the black satin coat this winter and are being sold in great numbers, both in expensive form and at moderate prices. The cheaper models are really most satisfactory investments than the high grade velvet models, for they will stand harder wear without being demoralized, and some of these cheaper coats, especially the fur-trimmed ones are effective.

Velvet is generally becoming, and there are, of course, wonderfully beautiful colorings for it. It is not difficult enough not to let it show, but if it seems less sombre than dark hues in any other material. On the other hand, it must be admitted that velvet shows wear and abuse more quickly than satin or broadcloth and is less easily cleaned.

She who is clever with her needle can make her own transparent yokes, stock collars and long undersleeves.

Brussels net is employed as a foundation, and the embroidery is done with very soft narrow ribbon. Gold and silver threads are also employed in this work, making most of effective trimming for the corsage of the evening gown. Pearl beads, glass beads and all sorts of imitation jewels are used in the decoration.

The groundwork is given a damascened effect by darning in irregular lines with strands of colored floss.

Then with ribbon or heavy silk you can embroider a pretty design around a central point where a head or "jewel" is affixed.

If you desire to use the net without an edging of lace or flat embroidery, put on an edging of tiny beads or a series of beads forming a scalloped edge.

FASHIONABLE TRIMMINGS MADE AT HOME.

If your dress allowance is a meager one and you still wish to be up to date in your toilet, acquire a new and simply learned accomplishment, the making of fringe. For your next assurance that fringe is going to be worn as it never was before. You may be lucky enough to have yard of it stored away in your treasure boxes, and, if so you may bring it forth; otherwise, though you cannot afford to buy it, you may possess yourself of some beautiful trimmings by beginning now to make them for yourself. After all, it is only a matter of stringing beads and sewing them to a guimpe, but you must have skill and taste in the blending of colors and the weaving of a pattern.

Silk fringe may also be made at home, the cords for the purpose being sold by the piece. The longest possible piece of cardboard of the width required, turn the cord over and over the board, keeping it even and straight, each winding twice but not lap over the last catch; catch each at the top by a stitch and the work is made.

Simple knots are a matter of practice. Macramé fringe is a fancy of the moment and the work in macramé might weave a really handsome dress fringe.

A STRIKING TAILORED WAIST.

For the woman who is attracted by the simplest, smartest tailored suits, hats, gowns and waists, one that I happened to see would not doubt, appeal. It was made of that rich, deep royal purple crepe meteor. It was absolutely plain, the only trimming being a tiny square yoke that reached about two inches from the top of the shoulders down the front, it coming to a small point in the back. The sleeves were tight with the turned-back mannish cuffs, and the collar was made of the same material and was the turned over style worn with the link buttons. It was buttoned down the front with small enameled buttons of the same shade. Worn with a plain, well-fitting black tailored suit and a small purple velvet hat, this waist would attract perhaps more attention than the more elaborate waist.

OLD FICHUS MUCH PRIZED.

Happy is the girl whose mother or aunt has been saving up for years some pretty trifle in the form of a collar or fichu that belonged to an ancestor of long ago. Many a little autumn dress owes its chief charm to the exquisite fineness of the embroidered cambric collar that is the final touch of the corsage.

The collar is finished in the centre by a tiny black bow or an old-fashioned brooch of the "catrout" pattern, so-called because in our great grandmothers' day it was used to attach the cap to the hair in front above the brow, or to secure the front of false hair in which many women indulged.

There is a peculiar charm about the Quaker collar with its deeply pointed fronts and a long point at the back that reaches the waist belt.

All manner of dainty shawl scarves are seen now, some of them contrived of hand-spun wool and others of chiffon with a lining of satin, in which case colors that blend prettily should be chosen.
